BENSON'S WATCHES AND CLOCKS, WATCH AND CLOCK MAKER, BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT TO HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES.

Opinions of the London Press upon Benson's Great Clock, and Watches in the Exhibition, 1862.

"As a sample of English clock-work on a large scale, the works of this are probably the finest finished that have ever been seen in this country. No Chronometer could be fitted with more perfect or carefully-adjusted mechanism." —Times, June 11, 1862.

"A more splendid and exquisitely finished piece of mechanism we have never seen."—Standard, June 17, 1862.

"Some of them are of great beauty; and if the English watch-trade only follow up with the same spirit and success this first attempt to compete with foreigners in decorative watches, there seems to be no reason why we should not get the trade entirely into our own hands."—Times, June 28, 1862.

"Ranged around the base of the clock were the Watches which Mr. Benson exhibited, and which have been universally admired for the beauty and elegance of the designs engraved upon them. The movements are of the finest quality which the art horology is at present capable of producing. The clock and watches were objects of great attraction, and well repaid the trouble of an inspection." —Illustrated London News, November 8, 1862.

YE who wonder at the fortunes which have been made in cotton, and who envy the splendid retirement of those who, three years ago, were barely able to provide themselves with the necessaries of life, listen to the story of the Commercial Bank of India. The name of that Bank is a household word among us. Notwithstanding the rise and prosperity of other similar institutions, it has always been regarded as the one peculiarly our own. It is, we believe, the oldest of those Exchange Banks which, originating in Bombay, have by the energy, intelligence, and enterprise of their management, been the main instrument in developing the trade of the East, and which, if we may judge from the brilliant results of their operations, bid fair to darken the glory of those famous institutions, the Joint Stock Banks of London. The Commercial Bank was established on the 1st October 1845, under the auspices of John Smith, William Graham, and other merchants whose names are ever remembered with respect. Subsequently its affairs were administered by old David Macullcch, in whose time the Reserve Fund of some five or six lacs was swept away to pay the losses incurred in certain transactions in Government paper. Yet, whilst the Bank was in his hands, the Shareholders had that feeling of security which, whatever his peculiarities were, resulted from a belief that he was an honest man, and that he would fiercely denounce and instantly expose any attempt to deprive them by fraud or cunning of their just rights. Then came John Campbell, and other honoured names of a generation which has passed away. During all those years the proceedings of the Bank were familiar to every one. Its measures were discussed by the community, not, it is true, with that closeness of argument with which men are accustomed to test the soundness of views, but with those feelings of kindly approbation or endurance which spring from a close attachment. In 1862 the Bank sustained another loss of five lacs by the Hongkong Opium Frauds: to this loss the shareholders meekly submitted, content to deprive themselves of dividends until it was liquidated. But a suspicion had taken root that the working of the Bank was defective, for it was felt that the dividends paid were not proportioned to the great risks of Exchange Banking, and were much below the dividends paid by other similar institutions. That that suspicion was well founded we need only refer for confirmation to the Profit and Loss account for the year 1863, and compare it with the results of the working of other Exchange Banks for the same period. The net profit of the Commercial Bank for the year 1863 is Rs. 10,20,185-8-4, equal to a fraction over 20 per cent. on its paid-up Capital. Now it is well known that the Mercantile Bank earned during the year 1863 about 40 per cent. on its paid-up Capital; and we believe that the Chartered, Agra, and Oriental Banks will show results very nearly as good. We mention these circumstances to show that the Shareholders who had stuck to the Bank in its days of difficulty, and who were now determined upon applying for a Royal Charter of Incorporation, were surely fully entitled to the benefits which might arise from the augmentation of the Capital of the Bank or from its reconstitution as a Chartered Company, instead of those benefits finding their way into the pockets of a few individuals in London styling themselves the "Promoters of the Chartered Company."

To help them in obtaining the Charter, the Directors requested certain gentlemen in London to act as "Promoters of the Chartered Company;" and they proposed that the Capital of that Company should consist of one million pounds, divided into 40,000 Shares of £25 each. To these proceedings the Shareholders assented at their meeting held on the 29th July 1863. The paid-up Capital of the Commercial Bank, which then consisted of 10,000 Shares of Rs. 500 each, was divided into 20,000 Shares of Rs. 250 each, and augmented by the issue to the Shareholders of 10,000 new Shares of Rs. 250 each at par. The manner in which it is intended to dispose of the remaining 10,000 new Shares, to the benefits of which men of ordinary capacity would have supposed that the Bank or its proprietary only could be entitled, is one of those grand conceptions which, if regarded from the magnitude of the sums involved, distinguish men of genius from the vulgar rabble. The Shareholders were informed at their meeting on the 21st instant, that these 10,000 Shares had been sent to England to be allotted to such persons and at such premiums or otherwise as the Promoters of the Chartered Company may think fit. The extent of the wrong thus inflicted on the Bank for the benefit of those fortunate people the Promoters and their friends cannot have been understood by the Shareholders, for it appears that the proposition was read in the Directors' Report, at the meeting of the Company held on the 29th July 1863, and was not then objected to. The price of the old Shares (with one new Share at par) is to-day 120 per cent. premium, equal, when the old Shares are divided, and the new Shares assimilated with the old as ordinary Shares of the Bank, to 80 per cent. premium. Now, if the 10,000 new Shares which it is intended to allot in England were offered to the Shareholders at 80 per cent. premium, we venture to assert that they would all be eagerly bought up. Ten thousand Shares of Rs. 250 each, issued at 80 per cent. premium, would yield a profit of £200,000, and, if this sum were added to the Reserve Fund already accumulated out of profits up to 31st December last, viz., £73,289, the result would be a total Reserve Fund of £273,289, a sum large enough to place the Commercial Bank in a position superior, in proportion to the amount of its capital, to that of any other Indian Exchange Bank. Here then was an opportunity at last offered by Fortune to compensate the Shareholders for the losses of former years, and to raise to undisputed eminence the reputation of a Bank which previously had never been able to boast that its management was as successful, or that its dividends were as large, as those of other Banks. But prosperity seems to have turned the heads of the Directors. They first of all induced the Shareholders at last Thursday's meeting to pass what we believe to be a quite illegal resolution for presenting Mr. Angus, the Manager of the Bank, with £5,000; and they then obtained confirmation of their scandalous proposition for assigning the 10,000 shares, or in other words making a free gift of £200,000 which in all justice belongs to the Shareholders of the Bank, to the Promoters of the Charter in London. The Promoters must be less scrupulous men than we take them to be, and must have less regard for the fair fame of the Bank with which they are connected than befits honourable men, if they can consent to mark the transfer of the Head Office from Bombay to London, and the opening out of a more extended field of operations, by so questionable an act as the acceptance of this fatal gift. The men who get testimonials in Bombay are not usually men who deserve well of their fellow citizens; we should be glad to believe that Mr. Angus is an exception to this rule; but, if he gave his sanction to this misappropriation of so large a proportion of the property of the Bank, his conduct merits the severest censure instead of the praise and profit with which it has been rewarded.

THE new Crusade has begun. With Sir Charles Trevelyan as their herald, the Rev. Dr. Wilson, Mr. Kennelly, and Mr. Murdoch as their leaders, and the Times of India as their vates sacer, the Missionaries have opened a campaign of which the avowed object is the overthrow of the present system of education in India, and the substitution for it of a proselytizing agency under the patronage of the State, for the con, version of Hindoos to Christianity. Their first aggressive movement is the seemingly modest proposal to have the grants-in-aid extended to Christian schools; but the real design is the appropriation by the Missionaries of all the funds set apart out of the revenue yielded by Indian taxes for the instruction of the people of this country. The plan of operations is clearly set forth in this passage from an article in Saturday's Times of India: "It so happened that the undisturbed conviction of all classes, especially the 'upper middle' class in England, that there is nothing worth calling Education which is dissociated from some form of religion, is in accordance with the careful opinion of the thoughful few; that the rude machinery of a centralized Government could never wisely handle so difficult a matter as Education; nay, that it could be handled by no 'machinery' at all, but only by the tender and loving hands of its religious nurses. Public ignorance was found to be a patient requiring almost feminine gentleness of treatment; and the coarse expedients of Government Education, as compared with the affectionate assiduity of a zeal inspired by devotion, was as the rough usage of a sick man by a hospital 'ward boy,' to the skilful sympathy of Miss Nightingale herself." The domestic illustration which suggests itself to the grand-motherly heart of the writer in the Times of India reminds us that there are more than one sort of sick nurse—the heroic sort of whom Miss Nightingale is the type, and the ordinary sort who are fairly represented by Mrs. Gamp. The utterances of the Times of India on Educational matters certainly resemble more closely the oracular but confused speeches of Mr. Dickens' model nurse than the clear and practical philosophy of Miss Nightingale's books. The sick-nurse illustration, for instance, is a ludicrous example of the want of accuracy of thought which pervades all our contemporary's writings on this subject. It is a purely Missionary figure of speech to talk of the Hindoo as a wretched sufferer in the sick-ward of a hospital, for whose benefit the Government is bound to employ and keep in its pay tender and religious nurses. The Government has nothing whatever to do with religion; its sole business is to administer impartially the Educational Fund of which it is appointed trustee by the taxpayers of India; and, if it were bound to provide religious nurses at all, the religion to which those nurses must belong is the religion of the people of India, that is to say, in nine hundred and ninety-nine cases out of a thousand, not the Christian but the Hindoo or Mohammedan religion. But all such considerations are forgotten by the Missionary party, in their eagerness to attain the great object of their desires, which is nothing less than the withholding from the people of India of the opportunities they now enjoy of obtaining an English education which is free from all suspicion of a proselytizing tendency. It may be the opinion of "thoughtful men," as well as of the multitude at home, that intellectual and religious instruction should go together in a scheme of national education for England. Our own impression is that the most thoughtful men of the day are in favour of secular education even in England; but practically it is of little consequence whether or not the Bible holds a place in the national schools of a country in which the whole population are professing Christians. But what thoughtful man, what politician worthy of the name,—for we do not believe that Sir John Lawrence, as Viceroy of India, would lend encouragement to any such fatal project,—would support the introduction of the Bible into the schools of India? Were such a change in the system of Government education once accomplished, the tenure of the English empire in India would not be worth a year's purchase. What claim, moreover, have the Missionaries to the privilege which they ask of superseding the "godless" secularists? According to the recent confession of two of the most eminent Missionaries in Bombay, Mr. Du Port and Mr. Bowen, conversions to Christianity are practically unknown in India, and the sole title the Missionaries have to the respect and confidence of the public is their endeavour to give the people the benefit of good secular instruction. But, if this is all they can do, how are we to distinguish them from godless professors and schoolmasters, and in what consists their superiority to other teachers that we should always give the preference to the fruits of their handiwork? If, do what they will, they can only turn out sceptics and deists from their schools, why should we shake the foundations of the British empire in the East to afford Christianity an imaginary triumph?

We have made frequent reference to the article in Saturday's Times of India; and we would ask what liberality of opinion or impartiality of judgment can be expected from a writer who can speak in this way of the debates in the House of Commons:—"The tendency of Indian official life is to produce a distaste, approaching to contempt, for English politics. We read from mail to mail the political squabbles of England, and wonder why so much noise is made about such utter trifles. The violent expression of public opinion always appears, as we read it a month old, to be absurdly out of proportion to the importance of the issues involved. The House of Commons seems to be the identical teapot in which storms for ever brew. Radicals rage, and Ministries totter, about nothing worth twice thinking of." No doubt, this is a true reflection of the official feeling in India about English politics. But fancy a journalist being proud of the combined apathy and ignorance, which only mark the depth of barbarism that can be reached by Englishmen whose misfortune it is to spend a lifetime in this country apart from the wholesome excitement and the invigorating influence of public life in a free country! Fancy a man whose profession is to teach the natives of India how to value the dignity and the glory of self-government pluming himself on the complacent stupidity of worn-out officials who believe that Boggley-wallah is the centre of the political world, and esteeming as a virtue the utter incapacity of such men even to understand the eloquence, the freedom, and the majesty which still inspire the debates of the first representative assembly in the world! From what platform does the Times of India venture to look down with serene contempt on the English House of Commons? We know that our contemporary arrogates to himself the possession of all the truth, the justice, and the modesty that can be found in Bombay; we know also that his policy consists, not in the display of these virtues, but in blind obedience to the maxims of priestcraft and tyranny, and unlimited abuse of every man in Bombay who dares to believe that he has a soul of his own which ought to be free from the control of either bland Secretaries or blatant parsons. The Times of India has no doubt its work cut out for it in Bombay, where the slavish sentiments which it enunciates have only too strong a hold on polite society; but a journal which undertakes such a work cannot but be an unscrupulous and consistent foe to the progress of the people in the knowledge and love of liberty and popular government.

IN correction of a paragraph which appeared in yesterday's Gazette, we learn that the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Westropp do not sit on the Appellate Side of the High Court this morning for the purpose of clearing off the arrears that have been lately accumulating, but only in order to hear certain cases which have been already part heard before them and adjourned for various reasons. The arrears on the Appellate Side are heavy, but not accumulating at present.

IT appears says the Hurkaru, that it it not the Gunpowder Agent for the Bengal Presidency alone, who is going home to learn his business at Waltham Abbey, but that the Madras and Bombay Powder Agents are also ordered home to England on the same terms as Colonel Voyle—full pay all the time, passage, to and fro paid, and eight months absence from India, counting as service. "We are glad to see, from these arrangements, that we in India are to be our own powder-manufacturers, and that the mistaken idea and intention at one time entertained, of supplying India with gunpowder from England, has been abandoned. There are many reasons of policy, and of military consideration, for not leaving India dependent for its supply of gunpowder on countries beyond sea."

WE learn from the Madras Times that Mr. McIvor the Superintendent of the Government Chinchona Plantations at Ootacamund has forwarded to the Chief Secretary the following Report for last month:—"The number of plants permanently planted out remain as formerly, viz., 66,622. The increase by propagation during the month is 20,118, being 1,574 plants above the average of the last six months, making the total number of plants at the end of March 3,41,865. One of the two plants cut down on the 20th of March last, for the bark submitted to Mr. Howard for analysis, has made strong shoots of 30 inches in height. The twelve plants of Chinchona Officinalis (a shrubby species) on the Dodabetta plantation gives an average growth of 3¼ inches or the same as last month. The number of plants issued to the public is 568, making the total number of plants distributed 11,393. The drought being unusually severe, it was found necessary about the middle of the month, to water the plants by hand, a tedious and expensive operation which fortunately it was not necessary to continue for any length of time as fine showers fell on the 30th and 31st. The dry season just passed has been the most severe experienced for 15 years; not a drop of rain having fallen between the 8th December and 30th March."

MILITARY LETTER.

LONDON, 3RD APRIL.

THE military world is duller than usual just now, and consequently this letter must be the same. The new musketry regulations on which I touched in my last are already being carried into effect. It is too soon to speak of the result, but it is anticipated that though the soldier will in the first period find it easier to obtain the requisite number of points, yet that when shooting in the first class he will find it very difficult to qualify himself for the pay and badge of a marksman. I hope, however, before my next letter to speak from experience. I forget whether I have mentioned that the Whitworth rifle is to be gradually adopted by the whole army. This I consider a mistake. I am of opinion that with the exception of flank companies—of picked shots—and rifle corps, the soldier should be armed with a large bored rifle possessing a flat traectory and not sighted for more than 400 yards. I feel convinced that many practical sportsmen and soldiers will agree with me on this point. The reasons I could give in support of my argument will suggest themselves to every thoughtful person, and to give them here would demand more space than I can afford.

The Duke of Cambridge has just issued a circular altering the regulations at present in force for the attaching officers who have passed through the Staff College to those branches of the service to which they do not belong. For the future officers of Cavalry and Infantry will attend at Woolwich or such other station as may be named for six weeks, in order to obtain a practical knowledge of Artillery. Officers of Cavalry will be attached to Infantry for one month, and officers of Infantry to Cavalry for the same period, and officers of Artillery for six weeks. The regulations under which instruction is to be afforded are extremely sensible and practical. Commanding officers of the corps to which College officers are attached are directed to select only such subjects for instruction as are special to their arm, and will omit those which are common to all branches. Artillery officers for instance are not to be required to attend Riding School or stable duties, neither are they, in pursuance of this principle, to be attached to Infantry at all. In the same manner Cavalry officers attached to the Artillery are not to attend stable duties. As regards Infantry officers attached to Cavalry the commanding officers having ascertained that they possess good hands and seats are not to insist on all the minutiæ of Cavalry drill.

On the 24th of March some very valuable experiments took place at Woolwich with steel shots against steel targets. The result of the trial, extracted from the columns of the United Service Gazette, is as follows:—The targets had been made for the different firms at the Millwall works and consisted of rolled armour plates 5½ in. thick. To each target—7 ft. by 3 ft. 6 in.—there were two railway ties, and two back supports; each of the latter rested upon, and was fastened to, a thick post firmly sunk into the ground. In addition there were two uprights with cross beams binding the whole together. The steel shots fired against each target were likewise constructed for the owners of the target and after their plan. The guns used were Armstrong guns. The details of the effect I have no time to give here, but I may mention that perhaps the bottom plate may be considered to have stood the trial best, the indentations being only three in. deep; the rear of the target was however much damaged.

The question of diminishing the terrible effects of the social evil among our soldiers and sailors has lately excited the attention and procured some support from the authorities. The Secretary for War has promised to support ten beds in the London Lock Hospital to be filled by patients sent from Woolwich, and further to grant the sum of £50 annually to be employed in conveying these unfortunate women to London, washing their linen, and relieving cases of urgent distress. This is a small beginning, still it is a beginning, and may be reckoned the first victory gained by real philanthropists over the monkish sentimentalists who insisted, that, however dirty the inside of the whitened cup should be, it should not publicly be called foul.

A very good article has appeared in the Army and Navy Gazette respecting the Indian Reliefs. He shows that notwithstanding Sir Charles Wood's promises there is very little prospect of regiments being brought home at the end of the ten years. Disturbing causes have already interfered with the anticipated routine, and that such will again occur can scarcely be doubted. Even, however, should the reliefs go on with regularity the hardship will be very great on some regiments, thus the 93rd will not return till 1871 and the 3rd Battalion Rifle Brigade and 3rd Battalion 60th till 1873. Those who have friends in those regiments are, however, consoled by the assurance that the plan of Overland transport is approved of and will be carried into effect in a year or two. The intention is that troops shall be sent in man-of-war steamers to Alexandria and from Suez in steamers to be built for the purpose.

In the same journal is a page extracted from an Indian paper regarding the accommodation of the Renown, which ship is conveying the 8th Huzaars to England. It asserts that the ship is a filthy, crazy old tub, and that the accommodation and provisions are disgraceful. The Renown is one of the finest and fastest sailing vessels afloat: has only been built some five or six years; is in appearance like the smartest frigate in the Royal Navy; is officered by gentlemen who are first-rate seamen and notorious for the care they take of their passengers; and is most liberally found in provisions, &c. I speak from personal experience, and, moreover, know on the strength of letters received from the Adjutant of the 8th Huzaars that the complaints made in the Indian paper above alluded to are wilful falsehoods. It will be sufficient to add that the Renown belongs to the celebrated firm of Green & Co.

A fearful explosion has taken place in the Royal Artillery Laboratory at Quebec, by which eleven men and Captain Mahon and three men have been wounded. It seems that a party was engaged in destroying old fuzes and making new ones. Unfortunately one of the fuzes discharged backwards instead of forwards, hence the explosion.

Major General Eyre will not vacate the command at Chatham till the 1st July. Major General Rochfort Scott, from the Royal Military College, has been appointed Lieutenant Governor of Guernsey; and Colonel Yorke, who was wounded at Balaklava, Commandant of the R. M. Asylum, Chelsea. Brevet Lieutenant Colonel James Gubbins, 23rd Fusiliers, has been appointed Assistant Adjutant General, Malta, vice Colonel Willis, whose period of Staff service has expired. Colonel Wetherall, Deputy Quarter Master General in Ireland, is to continue in his appointment for some nine months longer, the period of his absence in Canada not being counted in his five years' Staff service.

Among the deaths which have lately occurred may be mentioned those of Major Genl. W. J. King at Hythe, Kent, on the 24th March; Lieut. H. Pautte, 50th Rifles, at Boulogne, on Good Friday; and Charlotte Flora Fenwick, eldest daughter of the late Col. J. Fenwick, H. E. I. Co.'s service, at Wincanton on March 13th.

A great scandal has occurred at Brighton in which Mrs. Grant, widow of Major Grant who was killed in the Mutiny, is involved. She had ensured her furniture for £500, and soon after she left the house it was discovered to be or have been set on fire in no less than eight places. She has been committed to trial but admitted to bail.

The book of the week is the "Memoirs and Letters of General Sir William Napier," edited by his son-in-law Mr. Bruce, M. P. I have not yet finished reading the book, so all I can say at present is that it is in the highest degree interesting, and full of many anecdotes hitherto unpublished.

The Volunteer Review at Farley Heath went off with most complete success. It took the shape of a sham fight. The whole was under the command of Sir John Pennefather, Major General Rumley leading the assailants and Major General Russell the defenders. 18,000 men were on the ground and manœuvred in a very creditable manner. Unfortunately three serious accidents took place. In two instances broken legs were the result, and in the third a clergyman of the neighbourhood was shot in the groin by a ramrod and expired in a few hours.

THE SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN QUESTION.—THE WAR IN SCHLESWIG.

It is said that the Austro-Prussian troops intend to turn the position of Duppel by crossing over to the Island of Alsen very shortly by means of Austrian pontoons. Everything is said to be prepared for an important action. 6,000 Danes are said to have beaten the Prussians near Veile, at the positions lately abandoned by the Austrians.

A terrific cannonade commenced at 3 p.m. on April 2, between the Duppel batteries and the allies' advanced batteries at Broagerland. The latter commenced bombarding the town without giving warning. The cannonabe was resumed with terrific force in the afternoon of the 3rd from various points in front of the bastions. Sonderburg was shelled from Broagerland. The cannonade and bombardment continued at night.

The statement published in many papers about a mutiny of the Hungarian troops before Fredericia is emphatically denied in a telegram which Count Rechberg has forwarded to the Austrian embassy in London. Count Rechberg declares that the rumour is absurd, and that the disposition of the Hungarian regiments is quite satisfactory to Austria.

The Chief President Rosen and the whole municipality of Flensburg are said to have been dismissed. An extraordinary war-tax has been imposed on the town of Flensburg, and will, most likely, also be levied upon some other places in Schleswig.

A meeting of delegates from various districts of the Duchy of Schleswig is expected to take place shortly in reference to the proposed Conference. Resolutions will be submitted to the assembly that Schleswig and Holstein are independent countries since the death of Frederick VII., and only owe allegiance to their rightful prince, Frederick VIII. The resolutions further declare that the inhabitants of the Duchy consider themselves justified in demanding that the Powers participating in the Conference shall come to no definite decision respecting their future without their consent.

The Prussians have again attempted to carry Duppel by assault, and have been again repulsed. Such is, in effect, the substance of the telegrams which have reached us in reference to the operations of March 28. We have been furnished with both a German and a Danish version of what occurred on that day, but though, as might have been anticipated, they differ in some particulars, they agree in the result. At an hour so early in the morning as to give to the attempt all the character of a night attack, the Prussians endeavoured to carry the Danish position by surprise. They succeeded, according to the admission of the Danish commander-in-chief, in penetrating between two of the lines of entrenchments, but were subsequently compelled to retire. The German account refers the initiative in the engagement to the Danes, who attempted to dislodge a Prussian brigade from an advanced position which it had succeeded in occupying in the course of the preceding day. Both versions agree in stating the fighting to have been most severe, and the losses mutually inflicted to have been comparatively large. Both besiegers and besieged claim to have made prisoners; and whilst the Danes allege that they repulsed the assailants, the latter assert that they succeeded in recovering and retaining the position from which the former endeavoured to dislodge them. It is, however, abundantly clear, even on their own admission, that the Germans did not succeed in advancing their outposts beyond the point which they occupied before the engagement began, and if we ascribe the attack, as is most probable, to them we are driven to the conclusion that its object, whatever it may have been, signally failed. The engagement is said to have lasted seven hours. The fighting became hand-to-hand, the troops engaged using the butt ends of their muskets as well as the bayonet. The Danish ironclad Rolf Krake took an effective part in the contest.

On the night of the 29th March the Prussians succeeded in opening the first parallel before Duppel. The Danes, it is said, did not discover the working parties, and the parallel was finished by 2500 men of the Canstein Brigade, without any disturbance from the Danes. Two battalions of the Groben Brigade acted as a covering party. On the 30th several shots were fired from the fortress on the newly-completed work.

The 'Times' correspondent at the Danish headquarters, Sonderborg, writing under date of March 27, says:—

If the modern art of war consists in inflicting the greatest possible injury upon an enemy with the least possible waste of time, blood, and money, then one may be permitted to doubt whether the Prussians have attained any very high degree of proficiency in the craft; and if war is still to be, as it was among savages, merely the art of killing men, even then the Prussians may be looked upon as mere bunglers in its pursuit. It is now no less than a fortnight (from 14th of March) since they opened fire from their batteries on the cliff of the Broagerland. The cannonade has never entirely ceased throughout the whole of a day or night. No less than 500 or 600 shots and shells have been fired on an average daily; 7,500 of such missiles, on the very lowest computation, have been thrown upon the Duppel bastions, yet it may be doubted whether as many as 75 Danish men or officers have been disabled by the cannon since all the noise and earthquake began. The Prussians are thus purchasing their enemies' lives at the expense of about 500 shots per head, and I have to state the fact that 1,000 balls and shells on one day recently had not produced a single scratch or bruise to reward the artilleryman for his trouble. The average of casualties in the Danish forts hardly exceeds three or four men hors de combat daily. Up to this time the Danes have been marvellously chary of their ammunition. They hardly ever answer more than one to three of the enemy's shots. Perhaps they wait till a greater proximity neutralises the advantage of the Prussian rifled artillery,—perhaps they disdain to waste powder and shot against mere inert matter, and will not bestir themselves till they can point their cannon at the breasts of their assailants.

The latest advises received at Copenhagen assert that Jutland has been evacuated by the Prussians, and that only a small force of Austrians is to remain in the southern part of the province.

THE CONFERENCE.

'La France' of yesterday believes itself able to state that all the Powers interested have agreed that a Conference shall be held in London on the Dano-German question. The 'Pays,' speaking of the possibility of the meeting of a Conference, says:—"France would only ask that the inhabitants of the Duchies should declare themselves relative to the government they wish to have, in the event of the greater part of the Powers abandoning the basis of the treaty of 1852."

Austria and Prussia have addressed circular despatches to the States of the German Confederation, which are identical in their essential points. These communications request the German governments to use their influence for the despatch to the Conference of a common representive for all the minor States. An independent representation of the Diet at the Conference is most important, and does not prejudice the question of the duchies, since the Conference is to be held without any bases being previously fixed, and since there has been no question of the decision of the majority being conclusive.

THF PROPOSED CONFERENCE.

It is announced that the Conference is to commence its sittings on the 12th of April, but there is a hitch somewhere still. Denmark had accepted a proposal to confer upon the basis of the treaty of 1852, but it was known that this would be rejected by the Diet. Her Majesty's Government therefore agreed to a Conference without bases, and to this proposition Denmark has not yet consented. To accept is to relinquish the treaty of 1852, and give up the guarantees for King Christian as well as for Denmark. Indeed, the French government it is said, already declares that the fate of Schleswig involves a question of nationality, and can be decided only by universal suffrage. Should that idea find favour the casting vote will rest with the Frisians and the doctrine of nationalities will have been employed to produce this result: Hungarians are sent to kill Danes in order that Frisians may declare themselves Germans!

The 'Times' Vienna correspondent, writing on March 29, says:—

Austria, France, Prussia, Russia, Sweden, and Denmark having accepted Earl Russell's proposal to hold a Conference for the purpose of bringing about a definitive settlement of the question relative to the Duchies of Schleswig and Holstein, the representatives of the parties to the treaty of May 8, 1852, will meet in council in London on the 12th of April. The Vienna and Berlin Cabinets strongly urge the German Bund to co-operate with them in the work of peace, and there is now a fair propect of their being able to persuade their Federal alies to send a representative to the Conference. Austria and Prussia have just forwarded an identical note to Frankfort in reference to the participation of the German Diet in the coming negotiations for peace. These propositions have been made to the Bund. They are:—1. That Austria and Prussia shall represent the German Confederation in the Conference; 2. That the Confederation shall be represented by one of the smaller German Powers; and 3. That the secondary States shall choose some person to represent them in the Conference. Should the last proposition be accepted, either Baron von der Pfordten or Baron Beust will be sent to London.

The 'Constitutionel' publishes an article, pointing out the difficulties to be resolved in the question of the Duchies. The writer says:—

"Considering the diversity of pretensions, France would not consent that a Conference should take upon itself to decide the destiny of the Duchies either by choosing for them a sovereign or dividing them between such and such Powers. The only possible solution would be to ask the people what form of government and what sovereign they wish to have. This solution would be in conformity with the principles of the imperial government, and would be the most equitable one. This alone could afford European order, general peace, and serious and durable guarantees.

Advices received from Frankfort state that disagreement exists between Prussia and Austria relative to the representation of the Diet at the Conference. Prussia, it is affirmed, wishes to be furnished by the Diet with full powers; while Austria supports the choice of a representative from among the minor States. It is believed that the Diet will support the Austrian suggestion.

The 'Europe' of Franfort says:—

"The Frederal Diet will not vote on the question of the Conference until the representatives of the minor States receive instructions from their respective governments, who are expecting to be made acquainted by Austria and Prussia with the bases which the latter intend to lay down for the conclusion of peace with Denmark,

The 'Debats' is of opinion that if the absence of any preliminary bases renders the Conference difficult, it has this advantage, that it leaves the opposing parties on a footing of perfect equality, inasmuch as it keeps their reciprocal pretensions in the shade.

The French and German press still believe that the proposed Conference will lead to nothing, and that it is only put forth for Parliamentary purposes in England.

The deputies of the Holstein Estates are to meet at Kiel on April 7, they have been convened by Professor Behn, Count Rantzau, Herr Reincke, and Pastors Versmann and Schrader.

During an extraordinary sitting of the Federal Diet at Frankfort, on March 26, the long-expected communication from England was submitted to the members in reference to the Conference between Austria, Prussia, England, and Denmark, as well as an invitation to the Diet to take part in the proposed Congress. The invitation was referred to the committees to be reported on.

The following is the tenor of the notes, dated the 23rd and 26th March, which were communicated to the Diet by Sir A. Malet, the English minister. The first despatch expresses the profound regret of her Britannic Majesty at the position of affairs brought about by the hostilities of which the north of Europe has been the theatre, and continues:—

"While taking an interest in the future of the populations of Holstein, Lauenburg, and Schleswig, her Majesty entertains the sincerest desire that a termination may be soon put to a conflict threatening the independence of a State bound up in the European system. Taking into consideration the position of affairs, her Majesty has therefore invited the courts of Austria, Prussia and Denmark to send representatives to a Conference which will assemble in London, to concert the measures to be taken for the speedy re-establishment of peace. Austria and Prussia have consented to take part in the Conference. Denmark replied at once that she could only accept the proposal if the Conference were based upon the treaties of 1851-52. These treaties having been concluded under the auspices of Austria and Prussia, and having been further approved and sanctioned by the Germanic Confederation, her Majesty's Government would have been disposed to accept them as the basis of the deliberations of the Conference. Apprehending, however, that upon the conditions stated the meeting of a Conference might still encounter some delay, her Majesty proposes that the only basis laid down shall be to find a means for the re-establishment of peace in the north of Europe."

The note of the 26th March expresses to the President of the Diet her Majesty's wish that the Conference should assemble on the 12th of April next. It invites the Germanic Diet to delegate a representative to London at the date fixed, to take part in the Conference, "the sole object of which is the re-establishment of peace." Commenting on these notes, the Frankfort 'Europe' says:—

We are in a position to state that the English Government has received the assurance from the Copenhagen Cabinet that the Danish Government would not be disinclined to take part in the Conference, even if it should not be based upon the treaties of 1851-52.

SWEDEN AND NORWAY.

The Norwegian Storthing has been closed. The King, in his speech on the occasion, said that Sweden, jointly with other Powers, would endeavour to obtain peace; but that she must at the same time be prepared to render assistance to Denmark against overpowering force.

The Norwegian Storthing have voted a sum of 800,000 dollars specie for armaments. The government was also authorised to employ the army and fleet in aid of Denmark should they deem it necessary.

Six thousand troops of the line will be placed on a war footing, and the whole fleet is to be fitted out for active service.

The Royal Life Guards and one battalion of each regiment have received orders to hold themselves in readiness to march.

FRANCE.

The condition of the Pope's health appears to excite much alarm. Yesterday some of the Paris journals described it as very precarious, but later accounts seem to think that some improvement is taking place.

The 'Pays' speaks of a serious conflict said to have taken place in Jutland between an Austrian and a Prussian regiment.

GREECE.

According to news received at Trieste on April 2 from Corfu the transfer of the Ionian Islands to Greece will take place on the 28th of April. A battalion has been disbanded at Missolonghi for mutiny.

TURKEY.

Intelligence from Constantinople states that Prince Couza, in reply to the letter from the Sultan, wrote that he was willing to submit the question of the convent property to the decision of a Conference. The prince also stated that the armaments complained of by the Sultan had been caused by the insecure state of things in Europe, and in no way prejudiced his submission to the Sublime Porte.

AMERICA

We have news from New York to March 23. General Grant has passed through Philadelphia, en route for Washington and the army of the Potomac. It is asserted that he will immediately advance upon Richmond. Lee was giving signs of forward movement, but a heavy snowstorm had put a stop to active operations in Virginia. A portion of Longstreet's force is stated to be on the move to Kentucky. The bulk of it, however, is belived to be about to join Lee. The Confederates were reported to be about to attack Norfolk. A Federal expedition of considerable magnitude was preparing to ascend the Red River. A vessel had arrived at New York, which reported having seen a ship resembling the Re Galantuomo on March 10, running southward, with her maintopmast gone, but showing no signals of distress. It is to be hoped, therefore, that the gallant ship is yet safe. It may be mentioned that the iron-clad Re d'Italia has arrived at Gibralter, after a remarkably rapid passage from New York.

THE BOMBARDMENT OF DUPPEL.

(Danish Account.)

Copenhagen, April 3.

The bombardment of Duppel was continued to-day. Sonderburg is burning in several places. The cannonade of the enemy is kept up by the same batteries as yesterday. Our outposts on the right of the Duppel position were attacked several times during the night.

(German Account.)

Gravenstein, April 3.

The cannonade against the Duppel works commenced yesterday at 2 p.m. and lasted without intermission until 7 p.m. During the night the firing was continued at intervals. A conflagration has broken out in the enemy's lines. It is thought probable that their barracks are on fire. Our loss is inconsiderable.

DENMARK AND THE PROPOSED CONFERENCE.

Hamburg, April 4.

Private letters received here from Copenhagen assert that the resolution of Denmark remains unshaken, not to enter into negotiations on the Schleswig-Holstein question, unless they are conducted on the basis of the treaties of 1851 and 1852. The 'Flyveposten,' a Copenhagen paper, asserts that Denmark will be represented in the Conference by M. de Quaade, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, and the Councillor Krieger.

NEW PONTIFICAL LOAN.

Marseilles, April 3.

Advices from Rome to the 30th of March announce that a Pontifical rescript had been published authorising a loan of 40 millions lire to defray the expenses of the Public Administration.

DENMAKK.

Much interest is felt in Copenhagen in the evident change which has taken place in the plans of the allied armies before Fredericia since the 21st March. Military operations have almost completely ceased since the attack made on that day. Referring to the subject the Schleswig Holsteinische Zeitung of March 23 says:—

Field-Marshal von Gablenz was appointed to an independent command in Jutland some days ago, and in that capacity furnished with extended military powers. On the occasion of the attack upon Fredericia on the 21st, a collision is reported to have occurred between the field-marshal and General Vonder Mulbe, the commander of the Prussian Guard division, which compelled the Austrian commander to make use of his authority.

The Ministry of War published a despatch on March 28, announcing that the allies had left Horsens, marching southward; and that the town was occupied by the Danes.

The king had arrived on the same day at Aarhuus, and at once proceeded to Randers.

PRUSSIA.

The 'Neue Prussische (Kreuz) Zeitung' says:—"We learn that the king, on the anniversary of his birthday, in a most cordial manner expressed to the ministry his approval of the policy adopted both at home and abroad."

An official notification of the Ministers for Foreign Affairs, Marine, and Commerce announces that the blockade of the ports of Stralsund, Wolgast, Barth, Greifswalde, and Cammin, as well as Swinemunde, has not yet been carried out.

RUSSIA.

March 31 being the 50th anniversary of the entry of the allies into Paris, a review of the guard took place in front of the monument of Alexander I. The 'Invalide Russe,' in an article on this subject, says:—"Every nation has its own way of perpetuating glorious reminiscences. In France and England the monuments, streets, and bridges bear the names of victories. In Russia the exploits of our forefathers live in the hearts of the people, and the anniversaries are celebrated by reviews."

THE POLISH INSURRECTION.

Telegrams from Breslau report that a strong detachment of insurgents recently crossed the frontier from Gallicia, and, after a protracted engagement with the Russians, succeeded in penetrating into the government of Lublin. Another engagement, described as still more important, is represented as having taken place near Woochack, in the palatinate of Radom, and the result is stated to have been favourable to the insurgents. It is affirmed that the Austrian authorities are expelling from Gallicia all the Polish refugee families; and in fact, only allow them 48 hours to leave the province. This is neutrality with a vengeance.

The national government has published a proclamation relative to the late imperial ukases, in which it recommends the peasants not to pay the Russian authorities for the acquisition of land, which they have possessed for a year past by virtue of the decree of the national government. This decree maintained the indemnification of the landed proprietors by the State.

The 'Invalide Russe' accuses the Wallachian minister, M. Kogelnitschana, of openly sympathising with and tolerating the revolutionary Poles. The latter, however, are reminded by the 'Invalide' that now they are prevented passing by way of Gallicia, the only course open to them is through Bessarabia, Podolia, and Volhynia, where both the troops and populations are extremely hostile to their cause.

AMERICA.

The President, by an official order promulgated on March 14 assigned Lieut-General Grant to the command of all the armies of the United States. General Halleck, who is, at his own request, relieved from duty as general-in-chief, is assigned to duty in Washington as chief of army staff. Major-General W. T. Sherman is assigned to the command of the military division of the Mississippi, embracing the departments of the Ohio, the Cumberland, the Tennessee, and the Arkansas. Major-General M'Pherson is assigned to the command of the department and army of the Tennessee. In relieving General Halleck from duty as general-in-chief the President expresses his thanks and approbation "for the able and zealous manner in which the arduous and responsible duties of that position have been performed."

There seems to be a strong impression on both sides that General Grant is about to inaugurate a vigorous campaign in Virginia; and the Confederates are said to be concentrating an army of observation in North Carolina to watch the southern part of James River, in which direction they anticipate the Northern legions will appear.

General Sherman, who had gone to New Orleans to consult with General Banks, has arrived at Nashville to assume his new command. General Sherman was said to have done immense damage to Confederate property in his late raid—to have destroyed 150 miles of railway, and to have brought 10,000 negroes with him to Vicksburg; but we are not told anything respecting the losses sustained by him.

Firing is still kept up against Charleston, but no more casualties are reported

President Lincoln has called for 200,000 more men, to be raised by April 15. Both Houses of the Federal Congress have passed the bill authorising the sale of the surplus gold in the treasury. General M'Clellan and General Fremont had both been nominated for the presidency by meetings held in New York.

Arkansas has elected an anti-slavery legislature.

The Free State Government has been publicly inaugurated at New Orleans with imposing ceremonies. The wife of General Beauregard has died in that city. At the funeral a great public demonstration of sympathy was made.

President Davis has appointed the 8th April as a day of fasting and prayer.

It was reported that General Lee had broken up his encampment on the Rapidan, and was moving in the direction of the Shenandoah Valley.

A conspiracy has been discovered in Kentucky, having for its object the annexation of that State to the Southern Confederacy.

The Federal judge has decided that the English barque Saxon was illegally seized at Angra Pequena, on the South African coast; but we have yet to learn the result of the inquiry into the homicide of her mate by one of the Vanderbilt's officers.

A NEW HIGHWAY TO INDIA.

Amongst the projects brought forward during the last few days to be carried into execution by British capital and enterprise is one that promises at no distant date to effect a complete change in the connections of Europe with India and China. The overland route to India and China, which has hitherto been traversed by way of Marseilles and Alexandria, is about to be superseded by the construction of a line of railway that (instead of having, as at present, to make Marseilles the landing-place for the mails and passengers) will in future make Brindisi, in the south of Italy, the landing-stage for this purpose, and thus save the unpleasant sea voyage of three days by the present route. This object is to be accomplished by the European Central railway Company, who have undertaken to complete a break which at present exists in the railways between the north and south of Europe in Switzerland, by constructing a line from Chiasso to Biasca, in the Canton of Tessin, and afterwards to Lucerne, either by the Pass of St. Gothard, or to Choire by the Pass of Luckmanier. It will be clearly seen by a view of the map of Europe that this is one of the most important links of railway communication that remains to be completed, and, when accomplished, it will form an unbroken chain of railway transit over the whole continent of Europe. The commercial advantages that will arise to England as well as to Italy and the south of Germany will be of incalculable value, while the postal communications with India and China will be of equal importance, by shortening the distance to Alexandria by no less than 800 miles, and by this means the great improvement in the route spoken of in the last report of the Postmaster-General will have been realised by making either the port of Ancona or Brindisi the principal European port of the Mediterranean service. In order to carry out this plan the Italian Chamber of Deputies have already passed a vote of 6,000,000f. for the purpose of rendering the port of Brindisi equal to the requirements of the India and China trade. The works have been sanctioned under the government of the Swiss Cantons, and the Swiss Federal and Italian governments, and were formally commenced under a solemn inauguration at Lugano, on the 21st of January, supported by the leading authorities of the government and those of the municipalities. The concession granted to the company by the Canton of Tessin is for 99 years. Amongst the directors Colone Sykes, the well-known chairman of the East India Company, has been elected chairman of the European Central Railway Company (Limited).

THE MHOW COURT-MARTIAL.—COLONEL CRAWLEY AND SERJEANT-MAJOR WAKEFIELD.

Many of the circumstances connected with the management by Lieut.-Colonel Crawley of the 6th Inniskilling Dragoons will be brought under the notice of the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas in the course of the forthcoming term, which will commence on Friday, the 15th of April. The plaintiff in the case is Serjeant-Major Wakefield, and the defendant Lieut.-Colonel Crawley. The proceedings out of which the action arose are those which were immediately identified with the Mhow court-martial, and of which much was said in the early stages of the court-martial on Lieutenant-Colonel Crawley at Aldershott. The action is brought by the plaintiff against his late commanding officer for trespass in causing him to be arrested and confined on a charge of insubordination, the second count alleging that the defendant caused the plaintiff to be so arrested maliciously and without any reasonable or probable cause; and the third alleges that while the plaintiff was so under arrest without reasonable or probable cause, the defendant, by false representations, induced Major-General Farrell, commanding the Mhow division, and Sir William Mansfield, commander-in-chief of the Bombay army, to appove of the arrest, and to order the plaintiff to be detained in prison without bringing him before a court-martial, as he was bound to do under the Mutiny Act. The plaintiff lays his damages at £5,000. To this declaration Lieut. Colonel Crawley has pleaded:—I. The general issue of "Not guilty" to the whole of the counts, under the Mutiny Acts. To the count on trespass he has pleaded a justification, to the effect that the plaintiff had been guilty of gross misconduct, of insubordination, and in other respects of breaches of military discipline; further, that the defendant was justified as commanding officer in causing the plaintiff to be arrested and imprisoned. 2. That the defendant was justified in detaining the plaintiff in prison under and by virtue of the command of his superior officer, the commanding officer of the district (Major-General Farrell.) In the 3rd place, Lieutenant-Colonel Crawley pleads justification in detaining and continuing the plaintiff in prison in virtue of the command of General Sir William Mansfield, who was in command of the Bombay division of the army. To these pleas the plaintiff has replied, taking issue on them as to matters of fact, and further assigns that Lieutenant-Colonel Crawley kept him in solitary confinement, and on several occasions after his arrest maliciously and without reasonable cause punished him. To this part of the replication Lieut.-Col. Crawley has demurred, and has also pleaded a special rejoinder that what he did in causing the plaintiff to be arrested and continued in imprisonment was done bona fide in the discharge of his duties as commanding officer, and that if he did so wrongly it was an error, and was not done maliciously, inasmuch as he had acted throughout with a simple desire to uphold and maintain the discipline of the service Upon this issue has been joined. The demurrer is set down for argument by the full court early in Easter term, and the cause itself will be heard by Lord Chief Justice Erle at the sitting at Guildhall after Trinity term. Mr. Lush, Q.C., Mr. Hawkins, Q.C. and Mr. Prideaux are the counsel engaged for the plaintiff. Lieut.-Colonel Crawley will be represented by Mr. Montagu Chambers, Q.C., and Mr. Hance.

THE AMALGAMATION OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

The so-called amalgamation of the Indian and royal armies had no sooner been published when the officers of the former appealed against certain of its measures injuriously affecting their prospects. Respectful memorials were met with cold and contemptuous official replies. The officers were informed by the Secretary of State for India, Sir Charles Wood, that her Majesty's Government had previously well considered the measures complained of, and saw no reason to depart from them. The Indian army was compelled to look elsewhere for redress. An appeal was made to the Imperial Legislature, and last year hundreds of petitions from officers of all ranks and branches of the service—engineers, artillery, cavalry, and infantry—were presented to both Houses of Parliament. At first the Government seemed inclined to suppress all inquiry, and at the commencement of last session the Duke of Argyll assured the House of Lords "that he had anxiously considered whether the grievances of the officers of the Indian army were just, and he had come to the conclusion that there was no shadow of ground for the complaint that the guarantees of the Act of Parliament had been violated." In the House of Commons, however, it was well known that a power party was determined to support a motion for inquiry into the alleged grievances, and notice of the motion was actually given for the 10th of March. Sir Charles Wood, anticipating a defeat, forestalled an inquiry before a committee of the House by consenting to the appointment of a royal commission. The appointment of the members of the commission was, of course, in the hands of Government. To the members of the Houses of Parliament who were selected to serve on the commission no exception could be taken. The most of them were believed rather to lean to the side of the officers than to Government. This fair selection, however, was more than neutralised by the appointment of three military men not in Parliament to be members of the commission. One of these, Sir C. Yorke, as a Horse Guards man, was, of course, likely to take a Horse Guards view, but the officers of the Indian army were not afraid of open and avowed enemies. It was the selection of two men from their own service which roused their distrust. It was foreseen with what terrible effect Sir C. Wood would wield the adverse opinions of two men of their own service, and with what weight their opinion would be received by all the other members of the commission. To one, at least, of the officers selected there was a grave objection which should have restrained the Secretary of State from selecting him. He had been publicly mentioned as a candidate and probable nominee of the Secretary of State for a seat in Council. But this was not the only reason which, in the eyes of the officers of the Indian army, disqualified him for the duty of arbitrating between the Secretary of State for India and the officers of the service to which he himself belonged. His antecedents were well known, and throughout his career in India he never had identified himself with the regimental officers of the army, but on the contrary with the Government, to which, for more than 23 years, he was Military Secretary. In fine, he was a bureaucrat, and gained his well-deserved civil honours by his undoubted ability as an official man. But he was the very last man whom the officers would have approved, if they had been consulted to sit in judgment in a case between them and Government.

But notwithstanding these objections which may fairly be urged against the constitution of the royal commission, the officers of the Indian army have succeeded in obtaining a verdict in their favour on one of the two grand points at issue between the Indian army and the Government.

The report of the commissioners has been presented to Parliament, and the conclusion at which they have arrived is that, as regards the chief grievance of the Indian army, the assurance given by Parliament has not been adhered to.

It now remains for Parliament to see that immediate redress is afforded, and that any further delay on the part of Government should be put a stop to. It must be borne in mind that the number of petitioners is every year diminishing from service in an unhealthy climate, and that many of them are already beyond the reach of any measures of redress.—Daily News.

GARIBALDI'S ARRIVAL IN ENGLAND.

During the whole of Saturday, the 2nd of April, the town of Southampton was in a fever of anxiety and suspense, waiting the long-desired arrival of the Ripon with the great Italian patriot. Deputations had already arrived in the town from Bristol, London, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Worcester, and other parts of England, with gentlemen accredited to represent the Poles, Hungarians, and Italians on the occasion of the general's reception. The Ripon was expected on the following day, Sunday, about 4 o'clock, and the night was spent in a state of anxious expectancy.

Soon after 1 o'clock on Sunday the Ripon was telegraphed from Hurst Castle, and, instantly on the receipt of the news, the gentlemen who wished to welcome their visitor hurried to the steamtug in the docks which had been waiting, with steam up, ready to start at a moment's notice, since the previous night. Among them were the Duke of Sutherland, Mr. Seely, M. P., a deputation from the Italains resident in England, and Mr. Cowan, from Newcastle, and several members of the corporation. A short run down Southampton Water soon brought the party in sight of the Ripon, rounding the point at Hurst Castle, and as soon as she was near enough to distinguish the flag of the tug the Ripon stopped, and the gentlemen at once scrambled on board to welcome General Garibaldi to England. Garibaldi was in his cabin, for which, of course, such a rush was made by all his eager welcomers that only a few could get in, while the remainder so effectually closedl the entrance that the general himself could not get out. The Duke of Sutherland and Mr. Seely managed to get into the little apartment, and after a short and hurried welcome to its famous occupant the general came out to receive the congratulations of his other friends in the saloon. He was dressed in the plain uniform of the Italian legion, a dress which became him well, and in which, through the portraits, we have hitherto been most familar with his features. In stature he is below the middle height, but his well-set frame and rather broad shoulders give him an appearance of great natural robustness and activity, from which even his lameness could not much detract. His features, when not in conversation with friends, have rather a sad aspect; but nothing can exceed the animation of their expression when speaking (especially in Italian), and there is a winning appearance of good-humour about his eyes which is not easy to be described, but which those who see it can never forget. For the rest, his portraits are like him in all but this expression, and in the fact that the photographs convey the idea of his being an older and much taller man than he really is. At once, when he came into the saloon, he welcomed his friends with the most hearty cordiality, yet with a dignity that was striking when the peculiar simplicity of his manner was remembered. With him was his son, Menotti Garibaldi, who was wounded with his father at Aspromonte, but who has entirely recovered the effects of his injury, though Garibaldi still suffers, and, from the stiffness of the tendons of the ankle, is likely to feel his hurt for some time.

When the Ripon came close to the docks, about 4 o'clock, all the quays of which were lined with crowds, Garbaldi at once went up on the paddle-box, and the instant he was seen he was hailed with tremendous cheers, which were continued incessantly till the vessel came alongside. To all these salutations the general replied by cheerily waving the embroidered smoking-cap he wore. many of the crowd wore ribands of the Italian olours, and the ladies red jackets. Mr. Brinton the Mayor, is soon on the paddlebox by Garibaldi's side, and in a manly earnest speech, delivered with the general's hand in his, eloquently bids him welcome to England, above all welcome to Southampton, and informs him that a carriage is in waiting to convey him to his house. To all this Garibaldi replies, "Mayor, I am grateful, I will accept your hospitality." As the general sets foots on land (after warmly thanking Captain Rogers for his courtesy, and charging him with his compliments to the officers of the ship) a fair young lady is presented to him, and with a reverence evidently coming from the heart seizes his hand, and, despite all deprecatory guestures, raises it to her lips. He is next seated in the Mayor's carriage, and driven off to the Mayor's residence at East-park, amid plaudits on all sides. It was understood that he was to remain the guest of the Mayor until the next day when he was to proceed to fulfill his engagement with Mr. Seely, and that on the 9th April he is to leave the Isle of Wight to become the Duke of Sutherland's guest at Stafford-house. The Southampton town council meet at half-past 10 this morning, and walk in procession to the Town-hall, where an address will be presented to the distinguished guest at 12.

A meeting of the London committee takes place to-day to receive the report from the finance committee, and to consider the draft of an address to General Garibaldi. On the executive committee, are the following:—Messrs. R. W. Crawford, M.P., G. J. Goschen, M.P., Samuel Gregson, M.P., Colonel Sykes, M.P., Guildford Onslow, M.P., P. A. Taylor, Gore, Langton, M.P., W. H. Whalley, M.P., W. Ewart, M.P., W. Digby Seymour, Q.C. and M.P., Sir R. Clifton, Bart., M.P., Montagu Chambers, Esq., Q.C., H. Morley, Esq., Charles Dickens, Esq., &c.

EAST INDIA AND COLONIAL.

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE.—The Act of Parliament to enable Sir John Lawrence to receive his annuity of £2000 from the East India Company, in addition to his full salary of Governor-General of India was printed on Saturday, March 26. The Secretary of State for India is now empowered to pay the full salary, notwithstanding the annuity of £2000.

THE UNIVERSITY BOAT RACE.

The great aquatic event of the year—the Derby of the Thames—came off on Saturday, March 19, in the presence of a greater concourse of spectators than we have ever yet seen assembled to witness these exciting contests. For the first time, too, since the inauguration of the races in 1829 the day was honoured with the presence of royalty, the Prince of Wales coming on board the Thames Subscription steamer, George Peabody, and accompanying the race from the commencement to the end. The interest felt in these friendly competitions between the members of the two Universities seems to be increasing every year, and there was never an occasion on which this feeling has been more deeply evinced than the present. The length over which the race had to be rowed is over four miles, and throughout this long extent there was scarcely a part of the river's banks from which a view of the boats could be gained which was not thronged, while dense crowds lined the shores, both at the starting-place at Putney, and at the winning-post, from Barnes railway-bridge up to past the Ship at Mortlake. A good deal of this unusual interest was no doubt due to the knowledge that the hitherto unequal lists of triumphs and defeats had been at last balanced, Oxford having won 10 races and Cambridge 10, and that therefore an unusually exciting struggle would take place on this occasion for the honour of supremacy. Much more of the interest, however, was owing to the steadily increasing popularity with which friendly athletic sports and contests of all kinds are regarded in this country; and looking to the enormously increasing numbers which every year attend this race, it is evident that the time is not very distant when its annual recurrence will be looked forward to with an interest little short of that with which the Derby is now anticipated. This was the 21st race which has taken place between the Universities, for though the contests were begun in 1829, it has only been since 1856 that they have been continued regularly from year to year.

The Prince of Wales embarked on board the George Peabody from the Pimlico pier, accompained by Prince John of Glucksburg, and attended by General Knollys, Colonel Keppel, and Baron Guldencrone. When the boat came alongside the pier his royal highness and party were standing on the little bridge that leads down to it, and, strange to say, though hundreds were passing as they proceeded to or left the boats which call there every minute, not a single person recognised him. On board the boat he was received by the Hon. G. Denman, M. P., president of the Thames Subscription Club, Mr. Alderman Rose, M.P., and Mr. R. N. Philipps, and conducted to the forward part of the vessel, where a space was inclosed for the royal party. The prince's ensign being hoisted, of course, wherever the George Peabody went the prince was known, and was cheered almost as much as ei her of the contending crews themselves.

His royal highness's presence was a happy incident. He had, like a true English prince, expressed an anxious wish to see the match, but unfortunately a drawing-room was fixed for the same day, at so early an hour that it seemed impossible to get to Putney and be back in time. In this dilemma, Mr. R. N. Philipps, of the Thames Subscription Club, took the matter in hand and accelerated all the arrangements, including the start, by half and hour, sat up half the night writing letters to every one who had a right to be acquainted with the change of arrangements, and finally was enabled to pledge himself that the Prince of Wales should be taken up to Putney, should see the match, and finally be landed at half-past 12 o'clock at Hammer-smith, whence his royal highness could drive to Buckingham-palace in ample time for the drawing-room. In the two points which depended on himself Mr. Philipps was triumphantly successful; the hair apparent was taken to Putney in good time, and with equal punctuality was subsequently landed on Hammersmith bridge; but his royal highness had but a very imperfect view of the race for the fuliginous tugs rushed right across the bows of the George Peabody the moment the boats started, and from that time until Mortlake was reeched little could be seen except smoke, and looking at the boat in which the umpire had taken his stand, is was evident that he was placed in an admirable position to secure impartiality of decision, as he was kept in perfect ignorance of the doings on either side. But the voyage up to Putney was pleasant enough. His royal highness stood on the fore part of the vessel, not however, separated from the rest of the passengers by any barrier more stringent than their own sense of propriety, and he soon relieved many an anxious mind on board the little steamer by lighting up his cigar, and thus establishing a precedent which soon resulted in a general illumination.

It is needless to say that tranquil Putney exhibited all the abnormal vivacity which might have been expected from a village which only wakes up once or twice a year, or that the "Star and Garter" seemed to be doing a famous stroke of business. The Cambridge men had secured this famous and conspicuous hostelry, whilst the Oxonians were stowed away in another inn up a street in Putney, where nothing could be seen of them, until at last they rowed up to the starting point. The scene at this point at this time was exceedingly gay and animated and drew more than one expression of admiration from the Prince of Wales. The balconies of the Star and Garter were crowded with company of the Cambridge party all decked in favours of cerulean blue; and at the wharf was a perfect swarm of boats—college boats, watermen's boats, punts, wherries, and even "dingies" of low degree, in many of which latter were simple instrumentalists, who played up airs of anticipated triumph on cracked cornets, wheezy clarionets, and in one case a terrific set of bagpipes. There was cheering, some slight swearing, great firing off of small ordnance, volumes of smoke from the hated "tugs," and unpitying obstinacy in the navigation of the obstructive "Billyboys." It was, in fact, liberty hall on the water, and the presence of the heir apparent on her fore deck did not secure for the George Peabody any exemption from the pleasant miseries that beset her neighbours. Every eye peered through the smoke to catch a glimpse of the contending boats as they came out from their moorings. Cambridge was first on the ground, and previous to casting off guernseys and flinging away caps the crew took a little paddle down stream, and in doing so certainly offered grounds for an unfavorable augury of the future contest. There was a slight tendency to crab-catching, a wabbling of the boat in the water, and an indirectness of motion which did not look exactly like the perfection of drill. Amateurs looked grave, and began to inquire how it was that Cambridge could not get up a crew equal to Oxford. Some said the men were too heavy—others, that they were not "trimmed;" some said that the day was too fine for the Cambridge quality; and one hardy speculator affirmed that it was the mathematics that took the pluck and spirit out of the men. Then Oxford won the toss: Oxford always wins the toss, at least has done so for the last four years, and in selecting the Middlesex side had a double advantage; the boat had a clear passage before it, and was immediately under the eye of the Prince of Wales, who it was hoped would now have a fine view of the race. The gun was fired, the boats took their places, and the rowers took off their guernseys and threw away their caps. Cambridge performed this preliminary operation with immense energy, and each rower flung his cap down with the air of a man who meant to win the race or perish in the attempt. Oxford took the matter much more coolly. The men in their dark blue frocks looked exactly like a crack man-of-war's crew, and there was nothing in their looks to belie the illusion. They were bronzed hirsute, and manly, and when they at last bared their arms, displayed biceps, and triceps and deltoid and forearm in a high state of training and development. They did not condescend to fling away their caps until the very last moment, and from this it was inferred that they did not see anything in the coming struggle to justify extraordinary excitement. The start on both sides was perfect, just like two first-rate four-in-hands of the old coaching days, when the team went off at once into a clean 10 mile trot, without any previous prancing. The illustrious passengers on board the George Peabody prepared for a fine treat; but alas, for human, even royal expectations, the moment the boats were off, the whole steam fleet, tugs and all, recklessly converged in their wake, and in a moment there was nothing but universal bump, smoke, alarm, and confusion. Fenders were flying about in every direction, captains were dancing wild corroberies on their several paddle-boxes, the hateful "tugs" belched fresh volumes of smoke at every collision, as if to puff away all obstacles, and the result was that the George Peabody soon found herself bringing up the rear of an imposing fleet, with the umpire boat for a companion in misfortune, and nothing in sight ahead but the steam fleet and the smoke. One thing, however, must be admitted for the advance squadron, they shouted the vicissitudes of the race for the information of the rear guard, and in this way it was not long before news was heard ominous for Cambridge, of "Oxford a hundred yards ahead." This, however, was an exaggeration, as it was afterwards found that Cambridge kept breast up for a considerable distance, that at "Craven-cottage" Oxford was scarcely a length clear, which was increased to four lengths as the boats shot under Hammersmith-bridge amid the shouts of 10,000 spectators. The greater rapidity and regularity of stroke which Oxford possessed now began to tell tremendously. At Barnes the Cambridge men seemed distressed, while the Oxonians, some 8 or 10 lengths ahead, were rowing quickly, 37 strokes a minute, and were evidently as fresh as when they started. Off the Ship at Mortlake Oxford was leading by at least 12 lengths, and here they ceased rowing, imagining the race to be over, and at that moment 20 minutes 50 seconds had elapsed from the time of starting. Luckily they discovered their mistake in time, and rowed on, finally reaching the flag-boat, which had been placed some 200 or 300 yards higher up than usual, in 21 minutes 48 seconds, and about half a minute, or some 12 boats' lengths, ahead of Cambridge.

The steam squadron, 15 vessels in all, now drew up in one line right across the river, and exhibited a tremendous show of human heads, the owners of which seemed now for the first time to remember that the Prince of Wales was amongst them, and began to cheer vociferously for his royal highness. The George Peabody passed a short distance up stream to where the lately contending crews were laying on their oars close to the Middlesex shore; when his royal highness courteously saluted both crews, an attention which was most loyally and fervently responded to. It was the first time that the heir apparent to the Crown had been present at a University boat race, and every one seemed to be much impressed with the inteoesting character of the incident. The vast multitude shouted again and again for the winner and more vociferously still, for the losers, who bore their defeat with smiling equanimity. It was now that Mr. Philipps once more appeared upon the scene, took the command of the George Peabody, and peremptorily ordered "'Bout ship" for the return voyage. The lately contending boats started first in the same direction, and an opportunity was thus given to the prince of seeing them in action, a thing which his royal highness had been unable to do during the race. The boats looked beautiful, the rowers rowed splendidly, without however contending. There was not the slightest symptom of fatigue or distress in either and they darted away through the water like dolphins, resting however now and then on their oars to allow the prince to pass and in this way the disappointments of the race were amply compensated. Finally, and precisely to the stroke of half-past 12, the royal galley drew up alongside the dummy at Hammersmith, and the Prince of Wales and party landed amidst tremendous cheers. At parting his royal highness once more expressed his thanks to Mr. Philipps and the committee for the exertions by means of which they had advanced the time of the race so as not to interfere with the drawing-room.

THE DINNER.

In the evening the crews of the Oxford and Cambridge boats accepted the invitation of the Thames Subscription Club to a dinner at Willis's-rooms, the Hon. Mr. Denman, president ef the club, presiding on the occasion. There was a large gathering of the friends of the two crews, and among the visitors present were Mr. S. Gregson, M.P.; Mr. G J. Goschen, M.P.; Mr. A. Mills, M.P.; M. T. Collins, M.P.; Alderman W. Rose, M.P.; Prince Constantine Czartoryski, Hon. and Rev. L. Denman, Sir George Honyman, Bart.; Sir John Hansler, Mr. Sheriff Nissen, Mr. Sheriff Cave, Messrs. Tom Taylor, R. Young, William Massey, F. K. Dumas, W. Langdale, T. Hawkshaw (C.E.), T. Page (C.E.), John Beattie, Hugh Jones, &c., the captains and crews of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge who contended, and 120 other gentlemen. Mr. R. N. Philipps, F.S.A., acted as vice-chairman.

The Chairman, in proposing "The Health of the Prince of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family," took occasion to state that the present was the first occasion in history in which the Prince of Wales had been present at the Oxford and Cambridge boat on the river, and indulging in that healthy sport which it was the object of this society to promote.

The toast was drunk with great cheering.

The toast of "The Army, Navy, and Volunteers" was responded to by Lieutenant Young, of the Cambridge volunteers, and late Major of Wisbeach.

The Chairman, in proposing the toast of the evening, which was "The Health of the Oxford and Cambridge Crews," highly complimented them upon the pluck and endurance which they had shown in the late and previous contests.

Mr. Carr, in responding on behalf of the Oxford crew, said that the success on this occasion had been due, not to his exertions, but rather to his friend Mr. Morrison, who had taken charge of the training of the crews.

Mr. Hawkshaw, on the part of the Cambridge men, in a humorous speech acknowleged the compliment paid to his brother oarsmen and himself, and expressed a hope that next year they would regain their former position, and win back those laurels which Oxford had taken from them.

Mr. Philipps proposed "The Houses of Lords and Commons," and the toast having been drunk, was duly acknowledged by Mr. Gregson, M. P.

Mr. Goschen, M. P., in response to loud calls, rose and proposed "The Health of the Chairman and Success to the Thames Subscription Club." His own experience of rowing did not extend beyond taking an oar in a four, and he recollected that on that occasion it was said by some men behind a wall that that boat could not win because Goschen was in it. (Laughter.) He did not wonder that there was some little excitement that night, when the champions of the Cam. came to Father Thames, and not on his waters but in his wine down all rivalries. (Cheers.)

The Chairman in a few words returned thanks and proposed "The Visitors."

Mr. Tom Taylor, in responding, could not say that his career as an oarsman was nipped in the bud, as Mr. Goschen's was. He had been in a boat, he had handled an oar; and he, too, had been subject to criticism. He regretted to say that that criticism was most ironical criticism—a criticism he felt most keenly. It was from certain nursemaids who were present. (Laughter.) He regretted to say his boat was not a four-oar. He could not say whether it was a wherry or a "funny." It only had a pair of oars; and he regretted to say that the principal performance on his part which called forth criticism was a somersault backwards into the water. (Laughter.) He no less appreciated the courage and pluck of those who took part in these contests; and as the Duke of Wellington said of the battles won on the playground at Eton, so it might have to be said were battles won on the waters of the Thames. (Cheers.)

Mr. Collins, M.P., gave "The Health of Mr. Philipps," the vice-chairman, and this brought to a close the proceedings of a very lively and agreeable evening.

AN HINDOOSTAN MERCHANT.—"IN RE A. PEERMOHAMED.—" In the Bankruptcy, Court before Mr, Registrar Winslow. This was a sitting for proof of debts and choice of an assignee under the bankruptcy of Allarukhia Peermohamed, trading in King William-street, Liverpool, and Bombay, in partnership with several Hindoos, under the firm of Ahamedbhoy Goomlamhoosen and Co. The bankrupt came to this court on his own petition on the 1st of March, and attributed his difficulties to not having received remittances from Bombay, and having sent all the money he could spare to Liverpool. The personal debts are small, but the total liabilities on account of the firm of Ahamedbhoy Goomlamhoosen and Co. amount to £50,000. The assets depend to a great extent upon the result of consignments to Bombay.— An assignee was chosen, and Mr. Chidler was appointed solicitor under the proceedings.

FROM Mauritius papers to hand by the Mail we learn of very heavy weather having been experienced in that locality. The Earl of Elgin, C. I. Brandt, master, from Sunderland 12th Sept., laden with coals and coke, bound to Beypore, put into Port Louis leaky on the 14th of March. The official log states that on the 26th Feb. lat. 13° 08' S., long. 83° 13' E. very heavy gale of wind round the compass beginning from S. going round to W. then E. to N. E. with tremendous sea; both pumps at work all the time, could just keep the ship free, The main piece of the rudder twisted to pieces in the head which obliged us to bear away for Mauritius under easy sail.

The Hotspur, of 1577 tons, from Sydney to Bombay in ballast, put into the Mauritius dismasted on the same day. It appears that on the 1st March, lat. 16° 48' S. and long. 73° 41' E. she experienced a very severe hurricane which lasted 12 hours. Wind commenced at S. with a sudden shift to N. Ship was thrown on her beam ends; ship under bare poles, when the fore-top-mast, main-mast and mizen-mast, and every thing attached to them were carried away, lost 5 boats &c. &c. On the 2nd March bore up for Mauritius for repairs: Lowest point of Bar, 28.40.

The ship Janet, from Glasgow to Bombay, was spoken on the 1st of March in lat. 36 deg. 37 min. S., and long. 46 deg. 23 min. E., 100 days out. The John Stuart, from Liverpool to Bombay on the 23rd of March, in lat. 16 deg. 48 min. S., and long. 74 deg. 2 min. E., 84 days out. The Calimas, from Liverpool to Goa, was signalled on the 5th of Feb. in lat. 36 deg. 16 min. S., and long. 17 deg. 20 min. E., 86 days out. The barque Louisa, and the brig Jumna, had both arrived at Port Louis from Bombay.

GRANT ROAD THEATRE.—The second of the series of farewell performances by Miss Grattan came off in the above Theatre on Monday evening the 25th instant; the amateurs of the 28th Regiment again kindly assisting, the excellent band of that Regiment also supplying the Orchestra. A crowded audience assembled to witness the performances, and as the actors sustained their parts in a most creditable manner, they were during the evening greeted with repeated bursts of applause.

The pieces played on Monday were the same as those of the Thursday previous, but the acting was far superior. Miss Grattan was of course the favourite, and on her first appearance as Ernestine, the Somnambulist, the house gave her a most cordial and hearty welcome. For a moment or two she was evidently overcome with the warm reception given her, but she immediately regained her accustomed liveliness, and sustained the character of the Somnambulist with all the verve and cleverness for which she is so celebrated. The amateurs one and all strove to do their best and with the greatest success.

The Somnambulist was followed by the "Highland Fling," danced by Mr. Todd of the 28th Regiment, dressed in full Highland costume. This dance was admirably executed and loudly encored, and repeated with increased satisfaction to the audience.

The "Highland Fling" was succeeded by "Alonzo the Brave and the Fair Imogene," by Mr. Walter Buchanan, stage manager, which was sung with by far too little animation, and by no means so well relished as the dance.

The evening's performances concluded with the Loan of a Lover, which was capitally rendered; Miss Grattan executing her part with a grace and style worthy an actress of a first class London theatre. The amateurs, too, in this piece were particularly well up to their work, particularly Mr. Powell as Peter Spike.

Altogether the entertainment was a most agreeable one, and the performances much superior to what we had anticipated after witnessing the first of the series. We understand that the third and last performance takes place on an early day, when an entirely new programme is to be brought forward, and we trust that on that occasion the public will testify their appreciation of Miss Grattan's services by giving her a bumper house.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

To the Editor of the Bombay Gazette.

SIR,—The complaint of your correspondent "Wire" is not without foundation. There are suspicions of either gross negligence or foul play going on in the Telegraph Department as regards the signalling of mail steamers arriving at Galle and the delivery of mail messages. Daily notices are regularly given to the public of the arrivals and departures of ordinary steamers, whereas the most important notice—the arrival of the Calcutta mail steamer at Galle—has, for the last two or three mails, never been made known to the public. Something requires to be mended either at the Galle office or at the Bombay as regards this omission of duty, for, otherwise, merchants will be taken in by sharp speculators. I would also recommend the Chamber of Commerce to nonplus the mean measures of these speculators, and revert to the former practice of supplying their news to the public. Under the present arrangement the Chamber has not by any means improved its position.

A MERCHANT.

THE MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONERS.

To the Editor of the Bombay Gazette.

SIR,—The enclosed is taken from the Times of India of this day's date:—

"The death of Major Curtis, following so closely upon the retirement of Messrs. Forjett and Hutchinson, necessitates prompt action on the part of Government and the Bench of Justices. We have no hope whatever of replacing these gentlemen by others of equal qualifications, and if the whole Municipal business of the place is plunged into disorder and confusion, as we have too grave reason to fear it will be, Bombay may thank the faction that has 'hurried' out of office the very best Commissioners the place ever had, or is ever likely to have."

Now, Sir, I ask you, as a Roland for an Oliver, "is not such journalism a reflection on the intelligence of the community"?

Whatever truculent, trimming spirit your contemporary may display, and however much he may despair, and he is a good deal given to it, he is the only man in Bombay who doubts for one moment that better men than either Mr. Hutchinson or Mr. Forjett are to be found, and will be found in Bombay, to act as Municipal Commissioners; and this with no disrespect.

What, I ask, besides "minuting" have either of these gentlemen done that they should be set up on a pinnacle and belauded as the ne plus ultra of Commissioners; as the best men Bombay ever has or ever will have. I reply nothing more than any other men would have done who were similarly circumstanced. Such being the case it is not only a reflection on the intelligence of the community to tell us there is no hope whatever of replacing these gentlemen by others of equal qualifications, but an insult—dead and direct.

26th April. ONE OF THE FOOLS.

THE G. I. P. RAILWAY.

To the Editor of the Bombay Gazette.

SIR,—I would fain have abstained from troubling you a second time on the subject of railways, but "Englishman's" having charged me with having misrepresented him, and that for interested motives, obliges me, in justice to myself, to answer his letter in your yesterday's issue.

In the first place then, let me assure "Englishman" that I am in no way connected with the Railway, either officially or pecuniarily; and the only interest I feel in the prosperity and efficient working of the railway is that of a general well wisher of India and of India's children, and of one who dearly values the safety of the public.

As to my mis-representation of his statements by remarking that he is too sweeping in his condemnation of the natives,—and that he indirectly insinuates the "Railway Accidents" as being the result of the appointment of native pointsmen, gatekeepers, &c.,—the following extract from his former communication will bear me out to the very letter:—"I am induced to think that accidents may chiefly be attributed to natives, the incapaciy of the native element employed by the Railway Company. Pointsmen, gatekeepers, signal men, &c., appear by the evidence adduced in the present inquiry into the late misfortune, to be all natives, and, I believe, some of the firemen are so, also. Now, I submit, that such people have, generally and naturally, but very obtuse ideas of the management of their duties, or of the responsibilities attached to them. I believe, the training for these respective situations to be very superficial, and, if so, knowing their notions of steam and its appliances, what can be expected but calamities."—"We all know these are not unfrequent at home, but I do think, by placing Englishmen in all responsible posts—properly qualified men—public safety would be better guaranteed."

This is all that "Englishman" has said about the responsible posts, railway accidents, and his proposal of appointing Englishmen in the place of natives.

I will not say a word more but leave the rest of my last communication and that of "Englishman" to your and your readers' judgment.

26th April. A VOICE FROM A CORNER.

THE BYCULLA SCHOOLS.

To the Editor of the Bombay Gazette.

SIR,—The Times of India has recently put forth two editorial articles upon the subject of the Bombay Education Society, which I must take leave to characterize as much less ingenuous than ingenious. In some respects, the statements made very seriously misrepresent the facts of the case.

The Government of Bombay have thought fit to nominate a Commission to consider and report upon the expediency of removing the Schools from Byculla to Poona. Now, the writer of the articles in question argues as if the suggestion proposed by this Commission were identical with an "effort" made two or three years ago to take the Schools up to Poorundhur. The writer applies to that effort the epithet "vigorous;" and most assuredly it possessed all the vigour of utter unscrupulousness. It is well known to have had its origin in a memorandum drawn up by one whom we may safely identify with the writer under notice. That paper set forth two things: First, it painted the Schools of the Society alike, the Poona and the Bombay branches, in such colours, with reference to their physical, intellectual and moral condition, as to call forth the indignant denial of the Secretaries, the Revd. J. D. Gibson for Byculla, and the Revd. G. L. Fenton for Poona, and thus to defeat its own object by the very extravagance of its censures. Secondly, the climate of Poorundhur, a very agreeable one for eight months in the year, was represented as well suited for children throughout the twelve. This was so decidedly met by the recorded opinion of Dr. Morehead and others, that the scheme was at once and for ever abandoned.

It will be observed that the original promoters of this scheme directed his attacks not more against Bombay than against Poona. With what consistency, then, can it be pretended that this "effort" of his is identical with, or other than diametrically opposed to, the object of the present Commission which has reference to making Poona the residence of the entire School?

X.

THE TANNA MURDER CASE.

To the Editor of the Bombay Gazette.

SIR,—The Times of India, in its leading article today, commences by stating, that "the weak point of our contemporaries in Bombay is their facts." To the truth of this assertion, he bears ample testimony in the same article. When commenting on the case of the native illegally condemned to be executed in May last, by the Joint Judge of the Concan, you said in the only article you published on the subject, that a rumour, "for the truth of which we cannot vouch," had reached you of the convict's death. You distinctly said that you did not know whether the report was true or not; and nothing in your columns has ever appeared, which could be tortured into an assertion that the man was dead. Nevertheless the Times of to-day deliberately, and mendaciously, represents you as having asserted that the man had died; and then, having falsely put these words in your mouth, indignantly stigmatizes them as a "gross and impudent falsehood." Comment on the morality that can prompt, or the taste that can dictate such language, is unnecessary.

Your reverend censor next states with authority, that the man who was sentenced to be hanged in May, who was confined in the condemned cell till December, daily expecting to be executed, whose trial was then cancelled because the Joint Judge was found to have had no jurisdiction, was "tried again by order of the High Court, again found guilty, and sentenced to be transported for life." I hardly think this is possible; but, if it is, more blundering than that originally noticed has been perpetrated. Act XIV. was, as you know, passed on the 18th of last March, solely to legalise the Joint Judge's proceedings, and to render any second trials not only unnecessary, but impossible. The Times knows this as well as yourself; and pointed out in forcible terms the necessity of the Act. The first trial therefore is of course valid; and the second, if it really took place, is illegal and invalid as the first originally was. This will be quickly proved; and it is to be hoped that the case will come on to-morrow, before the Judges of the High Court. Your contemporary adds, "various questions may possibly arise before the case is finally disposed of." He is, in this instance, quite correct.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—Scarlatina—Whooping Cough.—These diseases of early life are now causing fearful havoc amongst children. If Holloway's Ointment be well rubbed upon the throat and chest, in such cases, the symptoms will be moderated, and danger averted. Any intelligent person can effectually apply this soothing and cleansing remedy. A little attention to the directions enveloping each pot and box of Holloway's medicaments, will enable any one to prevent the disastrous consequences daily resulting from neglecting infantile disorders till it is too late, and the little sufferer refuses food and sinks. Holloway's Ointment and Pills should have a prominent place in every nursery and on every toilet table. All that is healthy they preserve, all that is hurtful they sweep away.
